The Late Lamentable Accident in Scotland Street To the Editor of the Daily Telegraph

From the evidence of Mr Thomas Staniforth at the inquest on Saturday, the public might be led to think that the Sheffield Fire-office Brigade was mainly instrumental in getting the fire out, whereas the credit is due to the North of England Brigade, as the fire was got under by them before the arrival of the other company's engine; and I must beg to tender the North of England Brigade my thanks for their successful exertions.

I am yours respectfully

James Corbridge
